Bennett, of Iowa, being ...called for, came forward, and in a brief manner, remarked that the wheel of events had come around to an important point—that a period of no little interest to the pioneer settlers of Iowa had come, and in which, the whole country felt a deep interest—the door of a great territory had been opened—the country was exceeding beautiful, and its soil unsurpassingly rich—nature had bestowed its charms upon it most lavishly and profuse. The Judge remarked, that the settlement of this country would prove so profitable beside to the people of Western Iowa, as it furnish a delightful home to many a worthy family of poverty and toil, now toiling their weary steps higher in order to secure an opportunity to earn an honest living for themselves and their children, in ...

...is company, J. W. ... the Rev. W. W. ... a call a few days ... since they ... their return from ... which they ... located on the ... Elk-Horn river, about thirty-five miles ... above its mouth. These gentlemen, accompanied by Dr. M. H. Clarke and several friends, visited various points on the Missouri, Platte and Elk-Horn rivers, and after a thorough examination of the various localities, decided in favor of a site on the Elk-Horn river, a clear beautiful stream thirty yards in width, with a sufficiency of water for small class steamers fifty miles above its mouth, at its ordinary depth. The agents of the company after having decided upon the place for a location, gave it the name of "Quincy." According to the representations made us by the Secretary of the company, it will be a desirable, if not a beautiful location. The principal object, connected with the location which this place was the scarcity of timber; the method proposed to compensate for this deficiency, was to substitute ditches for roads in fencing, and clay, limestone and brick for building. These materials are found in abundance in the neighborhood of the site. The necessary machinery for producing these materials, and preparing them for use, will be brought along by the colonists in the spring.

It is expected there will be, at least, one hundred families gone to take possession of this wilderness site, and turn it into gardens and fruitful fields, and thus it will literally, as well as moral and moral beauty. We anticipate an important addition to the population of Nebraska in the Quincy Colony, which is represented as being composed of men of wealth, morality, intelligence and refinement; and we have no doubt, but a high order of civilization and intelligence will be represented in the Colony.

The object of the colonists are thus described in their published circulars:

"The object of the Nebraska Colonization Company are to obtain permanent homes for themselves and families, to advance the prosperity of those with whom we may be associated in the settlement of that new territory, and to obtain for ourselves and children, in the future growth and prosperity of the country, a competency.

"In joining your self interest to the common interest of the company, you are aiding in the accomplishment of these ends, as you will be entitled to a share in the profits of the company, in proportion to the amount of your investment.

"Among the first acts necessary, will be a road from Rock Island to Iowa City, and thence to Council Bluffs, and thence to the Elk-Horn river, and the establishment of a ferry across the Missouri river, at the mouth of the Elk-Horn river, and the establishment of a post office at the same point, and a mail route established between that point and Iowa City.

"The Missouri river is navigable, for steamers, eight months in the year, and the steamers of the Missouri River Packet Company will touch at the mouth of the Elk-Horn river, on their trips to and from Fort Pierre, Council Bluffs, Omaha City, Nebraska City, Nebraska Center, Bellevue, Bellevue City, Nebraska, Fort Calhoun, Nebraska, Winter Quarters, Nebraska, Iowa City, Iowa, Davenport, Iowa, Rock Island, Illinois, Galena, Illinois, Dubuque, Iowa, Burlington, Iowa, Keokuk, Iowa, Nauvoo, Illinois, Quincy, Illinois, St. Louis, Missouri, Alton, Illinois, Louisiana, Missouri, Hannibal, Missouri, Quincy, Illinois, Keokuk, Iowa, Burlington, Iowa, Dubuque, Iowa, Galena, Illinois, Rock Island, Illinois, Davenport, Iowa, Iowa City, Iowa, Council Bluffs, Omaha City, Nebraska, Nebraska Center, Bellevue, Bellevue City, Nebraska, Fort Calhoun, Nebraska, Winter Quarters, Nebraska.

"The territory of Nebraska is an extent particularly interesting to the States that lie contiguous to it. It will give them neighbors, and afford them a ready market for their produce and stock, and greatly enhance the value of their land, and add to their comfort and wealth. By us, its settlement will be a matter of great interest as there value homes be purchased. They will not belong to the North, East, South or West, their pursuits will be varied and commanding. Their harvests will not conflict with others as the products of agriculture, and the products of their labor may be appropriately sent to any point of our national compass. In return, the produce of every section will be required—each will be the patron of the other, thus cementing the bonds of union, and rendering the world and humanity at large the debtor of the valley.

"The time is not very far distant, when populous villages, and cultivated cities will spring up, as if created by the magic wand of some Arabian Enchantress, and a commercial influence be felt in the commercial world not to be surpassed by that of any other valley of the same extent in the world.

"It would appear that the products of the country are such as will be given and dependants of each other. They are only to look one for the necessary and luxuries to the other of their respective valleys.

"The enterprise which has, that the navigation of the rivers by steam propelled vessels, and the use of labor saving machinery in all the more rapid development of the resources afforded by the country in the production of corn, &c. (among the most important that will be applied to the cultivation of the valley, will be a saving machinery, by the application of which, one half more of cultivated lands can be employed by a single day's application. The cutting and mowing machines, and patent reapers, steam plows, &c., &c., will be put in use.

"With the known art of the command of the colonists, we anticipate their rapid growth, and the speedy acquisition of every thing that goes to make up an abundant supply of the physical, social, intellectual, and moral necessities of the people of which their community will be composed.

THE RECEPTION.

We are told that there ... 15 ... reception" at Bellevue ... last Mo... All the citizens ... some ... hors... ... many hundred ... there ... ... shall see wherein Excel... becomes coward... assault.—[Omaha ... October 13th.

It is with emotions ... heart-felt sorrow and shame, that it has become our duty to stain the columns of the Palladium, by the insertion of such a paragraph as the above. Until the appearance of this brief paragraph, we had entertained a more exalted opinion of our neighbor's intelligence and honesty, than it is possible for us to have now. Does the Editor of the Arrow believe all he is told? Does he believe that Bellevue contains less than fifteen inhabitants? Does he believe the number of persons assembled at the "Reception Meeting," did not exceed fifteen? One of two things are certain. If he believes the story he was told, he lacks that ... [illegible] ... believe us, ... measure of honesty and uprightness, for which the conductor of a public journal should be distinguished, and upon which, alone, its value depends. Now, to say nothing of the number of inhabitants ... nothing of the manner that strangers at other places, and attended the peoples meeting, we happen to know that not less than twenty-four persons used the ferry at St. Mary, and attended the meeting, and that many were kept from the meeting, by the report of the Governor's not being there.

We know not how many hundreds would favor the Governor, when he goes to Omaha City, another day, but we would give a straw for bonors, that would be lost to boys or that vote mobbed, because we didn't go out to ask them — however, we couldn't prevail ourselves ... before we did," any presumption of the kind. The language of the paragraph standing at the head of this article, when confined to its simplest form, seems to be that "a Golden Calf" had been set up, before which the citizens of Bellevue were required to prostrate themselves, or else they would be upon which he would take the honors of the Head, &c., that stood ready to shout it praise, who were [illegible] necessary ... TO CURE FOUNDER. — The Ohio Cultivator gives the following receipe for curing founder—more correctly speaking, the water founder; "Bleed the horse from the neck so long as he can stand up; then make him swallow one pint of salt; anoint well around the edges with spirits of turpentine; keep him from drinking too much water and he will be well in a few hours."

The first sheep introduced into any part of the present territory of the United States were brought from England to Jamestown, in Virginia, by the "London Company," in [illegible], the number of sheep in that colony had increased to three thousand.

FALL PLOWING.—A Subscriber gives his experience in fall plowing of ground intended for corn, &c. He raised one third more from part of a field plowed in the fall than that part plowed in the spring. It stood the drought much better. He argues that the sod gives more of its fertilizing qualities to the growing corn, when plowed in the fall.

It has been said that the bark of a willow tree burnt to ashes and mixed with strong vinegar, will remove warts, corns, &c.

Some one says that by making the wicks of candles about half the common size, and then wetting them with the spirits of turpentine, and drying them in the sunshine before moulding or dipping, they will last longer and make a clearer light than when made in the ordinary way.

MEAT.—Cook says the ice-house will keep the largest ox two days after slaughtering, three days the fattest pig, six days the round veal, and the lambkin three days, which will not keep longer than three days in summer.

WINTER WHEAT.

Can winter wheat be raised on the upland open prairie? An impression which may be called general has gone abroad, that it cannot, except under certain specific conditions. When the prairie sod is first broken, it is usual, and has generally been so since the settlement of the country, to obtain a crop of wheat, but as cultivation proceeds on the same land, this crop is displaced by others. In large districts of the Northwest, no attempt at wheat is now made with the exception of that sown in the spring. In others, or what are called White Oak Barrens, the crop is regarded as tolerably sure, though even then it is attended with many failures.

We have just seen a field of sixty acres of winter wheat, on upland prairie, which according to present appearances, must yield from thirty to forty bushels per acre. The land has been in cultivation fourteen years, and is precisely such as is usually condemned for this crop. It has never been manured, although it is treated with rotation. Its owner has annually obtained such a crop for four years past—ever since he has adopted his present course of cultures and firmly maintains that the highest upland prairie will not only produce this crop, but that it is the best land we have for it, being as sure to give full crops every year as Indian corn provided always it is rightly treated. In proof of this, he offers fields open to all, to be cultivated under precisely the same circumstances where others invariably fail. The owner of this wheat is Mr. G. Peterson, of Milledgeville, Ill. She [illegible]

THERE'S WORK ENOUGH TO DO.

The moral of the following stanzas, which we copy from a popular periodical, will not be questioned by any one. The sermon it preaches is the sermon of every day practice. It cannot be denied that there is in the world of men, "work enough to do." And he who struggles to perform his portion of it, will be fortunate if he acquits himself to the satisfaction of that great and high Power, which has bestowed all of us in this lower world, besides mental poesy rarely finds fairer words, but the moral is well developed by the effusion we now copy, we confess, produces something more than momentary reflection.—[N. Y. Atlas.

The blackbird early in the air,
To meet the parting hours,
And gather fragments left by man,
From ploughed ground and furrow;
The busy bee, that sings all day
Old summer's varied hues,
And every flower, would seem to say,
"There's work enough to do."

The humble ant that lives up out of sight,
The busy ant on the ground,
That runs so busy and so light,
Provides no magazine of wealth,
Yet gains a living and a name,
We should find it hard to do
Just as well, if we had half their light,
If there's work enough to do.

The gay moth of the summer hour,
The butterfly, painted so gay,
Is not idle, though it seems to be,
For its life is but a day,
And all employed, from the bee to the ant,
Except, perhaps, the flowers,
Have something to do, and do it with might,
Or else they lose their powers.

ENCOURAGEMENT.

Occasions of encouragement that in some measure dispel the darkness that gathers around the pathway of duty sometimes occur when least expected.—The following is from a friend in Pottawattamie Co., Iowa.

Pottawattamie Co., Iowa, Oct. 30.

Mr. Editor:—I write to congratulate you upon your complete success in publishing such a paper as the Great West demands. We western folks don't want to pay for works without meaning any longer—we have tried to quench our thirst for knowledge long enough with papers that are so full of "gas" that when it is thrown off there is nothing left but flat sediment. They blame the newspaper business for a moment, but like the boys sky rocket, fall unnoticed, unless it is by the eye of scorn. There are many other obligations, that might be enumerated, equally incumbent upon the parent, but enough have been mentioned, to show all reflecting persons, that there are responsible and solemn duties resting upon those, who have the care of children. And there is no doubt of the truth of the proposition, that the sins of the father are visited upon the children, to the third and fourth generations; because the neglect of parental training, in youth, and the consequences of such neglect produce more or less suffering in the offspring, and keep downward and onward.

HOGS AND CORN IN ILLINOIS.—A gentleman who has traveled extensively through the middle portion of Illinois and along the Illinois and Sangamon rivers tells us that in many parts of the country and particulary in the bottoms and low lands of the Sangamon the crops of corn are very good; in many neighborhoods the Corn was selling, delivered next winter, at 30 to 40c, pork at $4, and butter, at present, at 10 to 12½. He paid much attention to the prospects for corn, and pork, and upon the whole estimates farmers at full half the usual yield, and pork something, but not a great deal short of an ordinary season. He heard in fact, in all parts of all sides of stock at very low prices. One sale of 100 hogs, the largest transaction noted, was at $3 per head, big and little, as they run. The party selling said he had but a few weeks previously refused $10 for the hundred, and a less price for the remainder. Instances of this kind were rare, however, and by no means the general condition even of the worst corn-growing districts.—[St. Louis Int.

INDIAN CORN.—A French farmer has succeeded in giving to Indian Corn any color he chooses, by the following plan. Having received from China a specimen of Maize of a pearl white color, the grains of which were very small but very beautiful he was desirous to obtain the same grain but of other colors. For that purpose, he planted by the side of some of those ears American maize of a red color. He made a similar experiment with the maize of Tuscarora, the grain of which is as white as Carolina rice, and he thus obtained a crop, the ears of which were about 14 inches in length, and the grains of a blue color. Another time he planted some ears of the white and yellow variety native of the North coast of Spain. The ears attained a length of 12 inches, and the grains were of different colors.—The yellow maize on being planted near ears of the brown maize of Central America produced ears of a dark brown color which ripens eight days sooner than the other sorts. The former was previously but indifferent varieties of maize, and his object in continuing the experiments as mentioned was to obtain varieties which will ripen earlier, as well as larger and longer ears, and thus increase the produce.

Read the letter from John S. Crump, Grand Saline, Arkansas, Cherokee Nation, bearing date August 10, 1853.

Dr. Easterly—Sir: When I was in your city in March last, I purchased one dozen bottles of your Fever and Ague Killer, which you warranted to me. I have sold seven of the dozen, which I also warranted. Your medicine has given entire satisfaction so far, it having effected several cures of the Chills and Fever. One case particularly—a lady who had been afflicted since the latter part of last summer, and had tried a great many remedies, besides having a physician part of the time, all of which failed. She bought a bottle of your medicine, and before she had used one-third of it, she was entirely cured, and has enjoyed good health ever since. In no case has it failed to effect a permanent cure.

Respectfully yours, John S. Crump.

P. S.—I will be in your place again shortly, and will buy more largely.

WINTER COUGH.

The harsh dry winter cough which afflicts old people and invalids in a low state of health, can be effectually cured by the use of Dr. Carter's Cough Balsam. ## BRONCHITIS.

Bronchitis, difficulty of breathing, harsh cough, a slimy expectoration, with all other symptoms caused by an affection of the air tubes ...

EXPECTORATION.

Free Expectoration is the most important object to be obtained in all attempts to cure diseases of the chest and lungs. The cough which is so distressing is simply the result of a desire to expectorate, and as long as foul matter exists in the air passages, it will continue to irritate the membrane and provoke a cough. Coughing is an attempt to throw off this matter, and expectorants give great relief. Inability to expectorate in the latter stage of consumption is the cause of death.

DR. CARTER'S COUGH BALSAM,

is the great expectorant. It dissolves the morbid and diseased matter in the air passages, changes it from a thick glutinous substance to a ... and throws it off with the greatest facility. There is no better medicine in the world for the experimental qualities alone to be considered.
